INTRODUCTION

Considering that this is a Vocabulary and not a Dictionary, the following points have been kept in mind during its compilation:

1. The user of this product will not be a reader who wants to get the meaning of a particular English word that he / she newly comes across, but a Konkani writer who wants an apt Konkani word whose English synonym he / she knows. Or, perhaps he / she knows the Konkani word which escapes his / her mind at that very moment. Or, he /she might be wanting to put in Konkani a concept that he / she can express in English. Or, he /she could be looking for a Konkani equivalent for an English expression which he / she is translating into Konkani. In short, such a reader would need Konkani synonyms and not long descriptive definitions of English words. Hence, descriptive meanings have been, by and large, avoided in this compilation.

2. Many English words, especially adjectives are formed by adding a prefix or suffix to another word. Thus, the suffix –able is used in words like actionable, adaptable. Presuming that equivalents of such suffixes and prefixes would be helpful to the reader in constructing new words, the same have been provided in this compilation.

3. There are many words in English for which no Konkani equivalents are available, to the best of our knowledge. Such entries have been avoided. But there are many such words which are so very commonly used, that avoiding them might result in disservice to the reader. In such cases, sentences or phrases containing those words are given with their Konkani equivalents.

4. In any language (whether English or Konkani) there occur words whose meaning varies according to context. If this fact is not taken note of by the writer, he could end up using the wrong word. In order to obviate this situation, some words are added in brackets together with the synonym. For example, barrel n pip nt, boril nt, donn nt, kodem, (armachi) nolli f4. beam n patti f4, vanso m, pakaso m, (gaddeachem) isallem nt, (uzvaddachem) kirnn, (tagddechi) danddi f4. tie-beam: addem nt.

5. The gender of every noun synonym is indicated by m, f, nt following it. But there are some nouns which are not gender specific. Such nouns are marked cg (common gender).

6. Any Konkani speaker would have no difficulty in the declension of nouns which are familiar or in common parlance. But he / she might fumble in using a new or unfamiliar noun; this is specially the case of feminine / masculine nouns ending in a consonant. A provision has been made in order to mitigate this difficulty: such words are followed by f1, f2, ... , the explanation for which is provided under Abbreviations / Sonkxep which please refer.

7. There are two classes of Adjectives in Konkani: declinable (e.g. 'kallo,' 'kuslolo') and indeclinable (e.g. 'vaitt,' 'susti'). The declinable adjectives change their endings according to the gender and number of the noun they qualify. Such synonyms of such adjectives are given only in their neuter singular form, i.e. as 'kallem,' 'kuslolem.' In other words, if the adjective synonym ends in –em, it is declinable, and should be used accordingly.

8. Available dictionaries give verb synonyms either in Gerundial (ending in –op) or in Infinitive (ending in –unk) form. But in order to conjugate a verb, the writer has to add the appropriatre tense ending to the verbal root. But the verbal root is not always identifiable in the gerundial or infinitive forms. For example, mar-op/mar-unk (mar-ta), khorz-op/ khorz-unk (khorzo-ta), khorp-op/khorp-unk (khorpi-ta), ghev-op/ghe-unk (ghe-ta), pav-op/pav-unk (pav-ta), bellxev-op/bellxe-unk (bellxe-ta), perv-op/perv-unk (pervo-ta), zannv-op/zannv-unk (zannov-ta), katr-op/katr-unk (kator-ta), bhors-op/bhors-unk (bhorso-ta/bhorxi-ta). In order to circumvent this difficulty, the verb synonyms are given herein in a ready-to-use verbal root form. The examples given above are entered as: mar-, khorzo-, khorpi-, ghe-, pav-, bellxe-, pervo-, zannov-, kator-, bhorso-, bhorxi- respectively. They happen to be identical with the Imperative second person singular of the respective verb. All that the writer has to do is add the relevant tense ending. There is only one verb wherein the verbal root and Imperative are not identical: 'vochonk.' Hence, wherever this verb occurs, in order to avoid confusion, it is entered as 'vo- (voch).' In Konkani, unlike in English, negation forms part of the conjugated verb with na / nant being added at the end. In this vocabulary, negative verbs are shown with 'no' added before the verbal root; however, in practice, the proper tense form must be used. Thus, the Present indicative of "no lekhi-" is "lekhina;" but that of "na kor-" (destroy) is "na korta."

9. Konkani has many reflexive verbs which do not have direct equivalents in English. For example, zanna za-, khobor as-, sulus lag- for "be aware"; kachabhul za-, kanchve-, ddogmog- for "be alarmed". Efforts have been made in this vocabulary to accommodate such reflexive forms.

10. There are many Konkani words for which there are no equivalents in English or, even if there are, these are not in the know of most readers, being rarely used. Omission of these would result in their being not readily available to our Konkani writer, when he needs them or could have used them for a more effective expression. Thus the fear that these words would fall into disuseas far as the literature is concerned cannot be wished away. Therefore, some method had to be used in order to get around this problem. We find that Msgr. Dalgado successfully employed one such method in his Portuguese – Konkani Dictionary. For this reason, his Dictionary has become a reverse dictionary or even a thesaurus; together with some common words, he has added some related Konkani words with their descriptive meanings in Portuguese. To some extent the same method has been used herein, with descriptive meanings in English.
